

CLL 347 : Psycholinguistics

This course provides an introduction to psycholinguistics, which is the study of the mental representations and processes involved in language comprehension, production, and acquisition. Class discussion will be based on academic articles, covering such issues as speech perception, lexical access, and sentence processing. Issues on bilingual language processing will also be discussed.

Credits 3

Attributes

Humanities Division

Research Component

Upper-Level

Cross Listed

PSYC 347