ECON 301: Intermediate Macroeconomics

An examination of the determinants of national income, employment and the price level. Centers on the construction and use of models of the economy, principally the Classical and Keynesian models of the macro economy. Includes the theory and practice of fiscal policy, central banking, monetary policy and current policy questions, and discusses issues of the longer run growth of the economy.

Credits 3
Prerequisites
ECON 101 and ECON 103
Attributes
Required for the major
Pre-req
Upper-Level